

Nothing is more invigorating than the deep relaxation evoked by the bubbling song and soft flow of a stream winding its way gently through pebbles and rocks. Leader of the luxury bath and kitchen industry, Aquabrace recreates this pure natural serenity with the STREEM, its latest lavatory faucet line.

The neat square base supports a long and slim open spout that lets the flowing body of water cascade freely – a contemporary interpretation of natural creeks. Notice the flat single lever with its distinctive dipped edge, a delicate detail for a soft touch.

Is recreating the movements and sounds of Nature an unreachable task? Certainly not for Aquabrace. “It is a commitment, a raison d’être”, says Tony Masecchia, Vice President of the brand. “Revealing to the North American market the new faucet line STREEM is an endless tribute to our favourite of the four elements – water”.

Available in polished chrome, the collection offers three lavatory faucets: monohole, tall monohole, and wallmount.

Starting at $595.00, the STREEM is about to envelop bathrooms with its freshness and purity.
